This workshop provides an understanding of the disadvantage that shapes community and individual behaviour and affects life opportunities.

Facilitator Nairn Walker will present on why clients often behave the way they do; how economic class affects behaviours and mindsets; the importance of mutual exchange; and the impact of language registers and discourse patterns.

Nairn will also share both practical and strategic ways of optimising outcomes with individuals and families.

The workshop is of interest and value to DoE staff who plan, develop or deliver services to individuals, families or communities - teachers, principals, social workers, library staff, administrative staff, policy officers, managers, etc.

Educator Nairn Walker has worked across Australia, New Zealand, the US and the UK with over fifty thousand professionals to raise awareness of issues presented by economic disadvantage in every level of our schools, businesses and communities.

She is committed to better outcomes by using strategies that make a difference.
